Coastal Community Bank Promotes Jamie Trombley to Business Development Officer in Monroe

EVERETT, Wash. – Coastal Community Bank has promoted Jamie Trombley from her role as a Personal Banker to Business Development Officer, serving the Sky Valley communities. Trombley will continue delivering personal and business banking products and services at the Bank’s office in Monroe.

“Jamie has been serving the banking needs of this community for over 30 years,” said Katy Woods, VP and Branch Manager. “This promotion recognizes her growing small business knowledge and genuine desire to make a difference in the economic growth around Monroe.”

“Working for a community bank who strongly advocates for small business has opened my eyes to the impact a single bank can have on the growth and success of an entire business community,” said Trombley. “It’s more than offering a checking account or the best rate on a loan. As community bankers, we develop personal relationships with small business owners so we can see their entire financial picture and plan with them to reach their individual and company goals. Growing local business has made Monroe a community full of opportunities.”

Her love for community continues outside the normal 9 to 5 workday. When not in the office, Trombley likes to spend time with family and volunteer at the East County Senior Center. The Trombley family also works with other volunteers to maintain the grounds at the All Veterans Memorial Wall.
